

Nota Bene: B

B

Babbitt: a person who clings to narrow-minded, materialistic ideals of the middle class baccalaureate: the degree awarded upon completion of an undergraduate course of study bacchanalian: from Bacchus, Roman god of wine balderdash: nonsense, ridiculous bandy: to pass back and forth, to exchange baneful: extremely harmful, ruinous, or destructive barbarous: uncivilized or primitive barrage: concentrated outpouring or volley beatitude: highest possible blessedness or contentment beau monde (French): the gay (high-spirit merriment) world bedraggled: harried or in a condition of disarray befuddle: to confuse or perplex begging the question: in logic, an informal fallacy in which the conclusion of an argument is stated or assumed in one of the premises; also call petitio principii (circular argument) behaviorism: determinism applied to every detail of man's behavior belated: late or tardy beleaguered: embattled, constantly confronted with obstacles belie: to disprove or demonstrate to be false belief: a mental state affirmative of a proposition bellicose: from Bellona, Roman goddess of war belligerent: quarrelsome, combative benevolent: doing good benediction: a formal blessing, an expression of good wishes benighted: ignorant or unenlightened berate: to scold or criticize harshly bequeath: bestow by means of a will bereaved: in a state of mourning, in deep sorrow or grief at the death of a loved one beseech: to entreat, implore, or request earnestly bestial: of, pertaining to, or reminiscent of beasts, savagery or brutality bestow: to confer or to give bete noire: something one does not like or finds extremely fearful bibliotheca: library (abbreviated bibl.) bigamy: the crime of taking marriage vows while still legally married to someone else bilateral: involving or pertaining to both sides of something bilk: to swindle or cheat binary: pertaining to two biogenesis: the process of life arising from other living things bipolar: possessing two sides or poles, marked by diametrically opposed extremes blasé: unimpressed, bored blather: to gabble or talk ridiculously blithe: cheerful or merry in disposition bludgeon: to beat bluster: to threaten swaggeringly or issue extravagant threats bogus: phony, a sham bohemian: unconventional, reminiscent of a lifestyle free of the restraints and concerns of mainstream society

Nota Bene: B

bombast: to inflate or pompous in style bon mot: a witty repartee (response) bona fide: in good faith, genuine boor: crude, insensitive and overbearing botanical: or or pertaining to plant life bovine: of or pertaining to cows; dull, unresponsive, or slow braggadocio: bragging or meaningless boasting brandish: to flourish or shake menacingly brassy: brazen, cheap, or showy bravado: an open show of bravery brazen: disrespectful boldness brevity: shortness broach: to propose, to bring up an issue for discussion brunt: the primary impact of a blow brusque: short, abrupt bugaboo: an object of fear bureaucracy: the concentration of power and authority in administrative bodies burgeon: to bloom, literally or figuratively burnish: to shine by polishing, literally or figuratively buttress: to support or strengthen bygone: something gone by