

Nota Bene: I

I

ibidem: in the same place (abbreviated ibid.) iconoclast: someone who attacks traditional beliefs or institutions id est: that is (abbreviated i.e.) idealism: the view that fundamental reality is mind-dependent or mental in nature (thus non-spatial and non-sensuous); subjective idealism holds that to be is to be perceived; objective idealism maintains that there is no categorical distinction between the knower and what he knows - that both are part of absolute thought idée directrice: directed by an idea or purpose; e.g., Divine Providence idée fixe: fixed idea identity: the condition of being the same; the identity principle (law of logic) is a principle which asserts that if any statement is true then it is true idolatry: to think wrong thoughts about the true God; to worship anything other than the one, true, triune, and living God idyll: a rustic, romantic interlude; poetry or prose that celebrates simple pastoral life ignoble: dishonorable in nature; to be base or low ignominious: shameful or disgraceful; public humiliation or failure ignoramus: ignorant of illicit: illegal, wrongful illuminate: to brighten with light; to enlighten or elucidate; to decorate (a manuscript) imbibe: to drink imbroglio: an entanglement or complicated misunderstanding imbue: to saturate or flow throughout by absorption immaculate: totally unblemished, spotlessly clean immaterial: of no consequence, unimportant; of a different substance than matter; spirit immolate: to kill as if as a sacrifice, especially by fire immutable: incapable of change; unchanging impalpable: impossible to perceive through use of the sense of touch imparity: inequality; disparity impartial: fair, equal, unbiased impasse: a position or situation from where there is no escape; deadlock impassivity: apathy, unresponsiveness impeccable: flawless; virtually perfect imperative: essential, obligatory, or mandatory imperceptible: impossible to perceive, inaudible or incomprehensible imperious: haughty; urgent impertinent: rude, brash imperturbable: cannot be disconcerted, disturbed, or excited impervious: impenetrable; impossible to alter or affect impetuous: acting hastily or impulsively implacable: unbending, resolute implication: a relation that holds between the antecedent and the consequent of a true conditional or hypothetical argument; a material implication is a truth-functional relation that may connect two statements implicit: implied or understood implore: to beseech or beg for fervently importunate: demanding or impatient in issuing repeated requests impregnable: stubbornly resistant

Nota Bene: I

impropriety: incorrectness impugn: to brand as false in argument or discourse impunity: freedom from punishment or penalty in memoriam: in memory of in toto: altogether inadvertent: unintentional inane: pointless or lacking in substance incarnate: embodied; something that takes the bodily or physical form inception: beginning incessant: unceasing inchoate: only partly formed or formulated incipient: at an early stage incise: to carve into, to engrave inclement: harsh incognito: hidden or unknown incommensurate: non-proportional (Ancient Greek mathematics); out of alignment incongruous: unlikely inconsistent: characterized by a set of propositions that cannot all be true together or any argument having contradictory premises incorporeal: lacking form incorrigible: impossible to manage or reform inculcate: to instill (learning) by means of repetition or instruction inculpate: to incriminate incursion: a hostile entrance into a territory; a foray into an activity or venture indefatigable: tireless indelible: unremovable indelicate: blunt, undisguised indemnify: to protect from or provide compensation for damages indigenous: an innate, inherent, natural, or original characteristic indolent: lazy, as a way of life induction: inferring with probability a general conclusion from particular premises inductive validity: an inference is inductively valid when the premises provide some reasonable ground for the conclusion, though not necessarily a conclusive one inebriated: intoxicated inevitable: unable to be avoided inference: a logical movement in thought which draws a conclusion from premises ineffable: beyond the capacity of expression; forbidden as a subject of conversation ineluctable: unavoidable; impossible to overcome inept: inappropriate inertia: the quality of being inert or sluggish; in physics, the tendency of an object to resist change unless acted on by an outside force inexorable: defying explanation or interpretation infallible: incapable of error or mistake infer: to gather by reasoning infernal: pertaining to hell; fiendish, devilish infidel: a person who does not accede to a particular set of religious beliefs infidelity: the quality or act of having been untrue or inconsistent with a given standard infrastructure: foundation; underlying base

Nota Bene: I

ingrate: an ungrateful person inherent: intrinsic; necessary inimical: unfavorable, harmful inimitable: incapable of being imitated, matchless iniquity: immoral action or injustice innate idea: a concept known a priori and characterized by universality and necessity innocuous: harmless inoculate: to graft onto; to facilitate the buildup of resistance to a disease by introducing a minuscule sample of its virus into the body inopportune: awkward, untimely inscrutability: quality of being extremely difficult to interpret or understand; mysterious insensible: unaware, incognizant; unconscious, out cold insidious: enticing yet harmful insipid: flavorless, uninteresting insinuate: hint or intimate; to creep in insolence: an attitude or behavior that is bold and disrespectful insoluble: unable to be solved; indissoluble insubordinate: failing to accept or obey proper authority insular: narrow or isolated in attitude or viewpoint insurgence: revolt or uprising integrity: from integritas meaning soundness or whole; in mathematics, integral means "to sum to a whole" intercede: to step in, to moderate; to mediate or negotiate on behalf of someone else; to live for another interim: meanwhile (interval) intercalate: to insert interject: to insert between other things intermittent: characterized by a cycle of stopping and starting interpolator: to interject, interpose, or intercalate interpose: to place between intransigent: unwilling to compromise intrepid: brave intrinsically: essentially, inherently introspection: self-examination intuition: direct, immediate (non-discursive) knowledge inundate: to overwhelm; to flood invalid: not valid; characterizing a deduction argument that fails to provide conclusive grounds for the truth of its conclusion invective: insulting, abusive language inveigh: to protest strongly inverse probability: the relationship between the conditional probability of "a given b," and of "b given a."

inveterate: deep-rooted invigorate: to give energy to, to stimulate invocation: the process or act of asking a higher power (e.g., God) for help ipse dixit: he himself has spoken ipso facto: by the fact itself irascible: easily provoked into anger, hot-headed iridescent: possessing rainbow-like colors

Nota Bene: I

irrelevant: not relevant or pertinent; an irrelevant conclusion is an informal logical fallacy committed when the premises of an argument purporting to establish one conclusion are actually directed toward the establishment of another conclusion

“is” of identity: is the same object as

“is” of predication: part of a predicate indicating the application of the property expressed by the rest of it