

Nota Bene: S

S

sacred: to consecrate or be devoted to sage: a person of great wisdom salutary: restorative, healthful sanction: to support or authorize sanctify: to set apart; to make holy sanguine: possessing a positive attitude sap: to exhaust, to deplete sapere aude: dare to be wise sardonic: bitter or sarcastic saros: a period of approximately 18 years after which eclipses repeat but are shifted 120 degrees satiare: to fulfill to or beyond capacity saturate: to drench or suffuse with liquid or anything that permeates or invades saturnine: from Saturn, the gloomy Roman god of agriculture savoir faire: an evident sense of confidence and proficiency scapegoat: a person considered responsible for a fiasco or mishap who was not in fact totally responsible for it (cf. Leviticus 16) scathing: violently critical schematic: having to do with a diagram or scheme scientific method: a set of techniques for solving problems involving the construction of preliminary hypotheses, the formulation of explanatory hypotheses, the deduction of consequences from hypotheses, the testing of the consequences deduced, and the application of the theory thus confirmed to further problems scientism: the scientific philosophy that embraces radical materialism and positivism; the proposition that only scientifically measurable parameters are worthy of consideration scintilla: spark or trace scrutinize: to study closely scurvy: shabby, low secular: of this temporal world, time or age (to be secular is to be completely time bound, a child of this age, a creature of history, with no vision of eternity) sedulous: diligent, industrious seethe: to boil sein: being self-reference: a sentence about a situation which reflects back on itself semantics: the science of the way meaning is communicated through language semper fidelis: always faithful semper paratus: always prepared sensus divinitatis: awareness (or sense) of God sentence: a unit of language that expresses a complete thought sententious: tending to use many clichés or maxims in order to enlighten others septuagenarian: a person in his or her seventies

Septuagint: the Greek translation of the Hebrew Scriptures by seventy Jewish scholars in Alexandria, Egypt (3rd century BC) sequi: to follow sequential: arranged in an order or series sequester: to set apart (from outside influence) serendipity: the quality of coming upon important insights or discoveries by accident

Nota Bene: S

serpentine: snakelike

shalom: peace

Shangri-La: a paradise or utopia; from a fictional land of eternal youth encountered in the James Hilton novel The Lost Horizon shibboleth: a special term not widely known that, when used, identifies the user as a member of a group; the peculiarity of fashion or lifestyle common to a single group sic: so thus, written this way intentionally sic semper tyrannis: thus always to tyrants sic transit hora: so passes the hour sidereal: relating to the stars of the constellations signatory: someone who signs an official document or petition along with others simile: a comparison in speech or writing similitude: likeness or similarity simulacrum: a minor, unreal or eerie similarity sine qua non: without which not (an absolutely indispensable or essential thing) sinecure: an office or position that requires little or no work; especially one yielding profitable returns sinuous: winding, circuitous, serpentine situation: a state of affairs, maybe hypothetical, in which premises and conclusions may be true or false skepticism: the view that denies the possibility of knowledge or certainty (sometimes limited to certain areas) skittish: nervous and lacking confidence smattering: a little bit snafu: a badly confused or ridiculously muddled situation; total disorder; created in World War II by soldiers to stand for s(ituation) n(ormal) a(ll) f(ouled - euphemistically construed) u(p) sobriety: clearheadedness sobriquet: nickname sociometry: measurable distinctions accountable to social distinctions sol: the sun (solar) sola Christus: Christ only sola fide: faith only sola gratia: grace only sola Scriptura: Scripture only solace: consolation solecism: an act that breaks formal rules soldier: from solidus - a gold coin solī deo gloria: for the glory of God only solicitous: openly concerned or worried (about the condition of another) soliloquy: in drama, a speech given by a character when no one else is present on stage solipsism: the view that everything other than one's self is a state of one's self; the belief that one's own perceptions are the only meaningful reality sophistry: a seemingly convincing argument that is logically flawed by some form of ambiguity sophomore: wise fool

sordid: tawdry

sorites paradox: a kind of paradox involving repeated applications of a vague predicate sound: in logic, a deductive argument that is valid and has true premises sovereignty: supreme and absolute ruler, the self-determination and right to exist as an independent entity specious: deceptively plausible or attractive spinster: a single woman, especially a middle-aged one splice: to unite by interweaving separate strands or parts sporadic: irregular spurious: false, fake squander: to use up carelessly, to waste subject: for the grammatically simplest kind of sentence, the part which tells you what the sentence is about stalemate: a deadlocked political or military situation; in chess, a position where neither player can make a legal move stalwart: firm or purpose; steadfast stanch: to stop the flow statement: a proposition stereotype: a commonly accepted notion that presents an oversimplified or inaccurate viewpoint stigma: a sign of disgrace or low status stint: to limit, to restrain stipulation: a condition; an essential point that must be satisfied stolid: impassive, unemotional sullen: from solus - alone status quo: the existing state of affairs stellar: from stella meaning "star" stoic: above succumbing to sensations of pain or pleasure; a philosophy that advocates putting aside unjust thoughts and indulgences and attending first and foremost to the duties of life strident: harsh stringent: extremely strict stultify: to render foolish or unable to act intelligently stymie: to stand in the way of or to hinder subcontrary: one of two propositions that can both be true but cannot both be false subjective: originating in one's personal observation subjugate: to cause to become subservient sublimate: to transfer the force of an unacceptable inclination or impulse to a pursuit considered proper sublime: grand or lofty subordination: the state of being subservient or treated as less valuable subpoena: an order of a court, legislation or grand jury that compels a witness to be present at a trial or hearing subservient: bending to the will of another subsidization: the state of being financed by a grant from a government or other agency substance: (1) whatever is real; (2) something's essence; (3) whatever exists in its own right and depends on nothing else; (4) that which underlies (or has) the properties of a thing substantiated: verified or supported by evidence subsume: to encompass or engulf within something larger subterranean: under the surface of the earth subvention: a grant of money (by a government or some authority) to aid or support a person or institution sully: to besmear or make foul summarily: quickly and concisely summum bonum: the supreme good sumptuous: extravagant sundry: various supercilious: disdainful or haughty

Nota Bene: S

Nota Bene: S

superficial: on the surface only; without depth or substance superfluous: unnecessary superimpose: to place or lay over or above something superlative: to the highest possible degree supersede: to displace, to substitute or supplant supine: prone; laying down with the back to the floor supposition: assumption, conjecture surcease: end, cessation surfeit: excess surge: a gush; a swelling or sweeping forward surrealistic: unreal surreptitious: undertaken in stealth surrogate: one who acts in the place of another swastika: well-being sycophant: an ambitious flatterer sylvan: from sylva meaning "woods" syllogism: a form of logical argument that features three propositions and finishes with a conclusion; also called categorical syllogism sympiotic: the quality of two dissimilar organisms in the same place in a mutually beneficial relationship symmetry: the quality of showing complementary forms or aesthetically pleasing proportions synergism: the interaction of elements that when combined produce a total effect that is greater than the sum of the individual elements, contributions, etc.; in theology, the doctrine that the human will cooperates with the Holy Spirit in the work of regeneration synonym: a word equivalent in meaning to another word synopsis: a summary synthesis: a way of thinking that begins with constituent properties (particulars) and proceeds to establish general conclusions (induction)