

Nota Bene: V

V

vacillate: to waver between opinions vacuous: without content; lacking any intelligence vagary: an unexpected or seemingly capricious turn of events vagueness: a property of a predicate expressing the idea that small changes in an object make no difference to the applicability of the predicate valid: a deductive argument whose premises, if they were all true, would provide conclusive grounds for the truth of its conclusion vanguard: the most advanced groups (e.g., of a military force or social movement) vapid: flat, flavorless variegated: changing in color venal: corrupt, mercenary veneer: a superficial or deceptive covering venerable: dignified and worthy of admiration veracious: truthful, earnest verbiage: unnecessary words verbose: wordy

verdant: green (with plant life) veritable: authentic, true vernacular: the mode of expression in language accepted in a given circle vertigo: a feeling of dizziness and disorientation vestige: a remaining sample of something no longer common vexation: irritation via: by way of via media: the middle path vicarious: arising from the experiences of others rather than one's own experience vice versa: with the order or meaning reversed villain: from villanus - farm hand vindicate: prove correct vindictive: mean-spirited virile: forcefully masculine in terms of drive and energy visage: the face; appearance vis-à-vis: face to face visceral: deeply felt viscid: sticky vitiate: to pollute, to impair vitriolic: acidic (literally and figuratively) vituperative: verbally abusive, insulting vivacious: spirited vociferous: marked by noisy exclamation volatile: potentially unstable volubility: quality of being overly talkative, glib voluntarism: the view that asserts the primacy of will over intellect (as explanatory of human behavior, God's nature, or the universe as a whole):

voluptuous: sensually enjoyable

Nota Bene: V

voracious: greedily hungry vox populi, vox dei: the voice of the people is the voice of God