

History

Christ bespeaks not simply the person of Jesus, but his kingdom and lordship of the whole earth as well ... Not only is Christ the meaning of history, but nothing and no one else possibly can be. And if of history, then he is the meaning of man's cultural mission as well.

Michael W. Kelley, The Impulse of Power, p 4

Today Western culture stands perilously close to the brink of collapse. If we should wish to know the reasons, we shall have to reckon with the ethical-religious dichotomy that lies at the center of Western man's endeavor. Moreover, it has long been present at the core of Western culture. The terms which best describe these antithetical viewpoints have been and remain Christianity and Humanism. No others adequately explain the clash of viewpoints that lie at the root of Western civilization and can account for the strong polarity between what men today have come to value or detest in Western civilization.

Michael W. Kelley, The Impulse of Power, p 13

How has Western man developed culture? Upon what standard has he sought to erect it? There are but two options available: that which comes from God in His revealed Word, or that which arises from man's sin-darkened imagination. No mixture or confusion is possible at any time. All man's attempts at synthesis have inevitably led him to reject the former for the exclusive sake of the latter.

Michael W. Kelley, Impulse to Power, p. 17

Since 1860, there has been a major shift from absolute to process philosophy. That shift was first evident in Darwinism which emerged out of the conclusion that progress was taking place. It was fed from the presupposition that man is at the center and that man progresses. It is a faith that explains progress based upon man as the center who himself is in a process.

Glenn R. Martin (1935-2004)

There is no safety for honest men but by believing all possible evil of evil men.

Edmund Burke, Reflections on the Revolution in France, p. 249

The study of history is a powerful antidote to contemporary arrogance. It is humbling to discover how many of our glib assumptions, which seem to us novel and plausible, have been tested before, not once but many times and in innumerable guises; and discovered to be, at great human cost, wholly false.

Paul Johnson, The Quotable Paul Johnson: A Topical Compilation of His Wit, Wisdom and Satire, p. 138

I wonder what radical feminists make of the fact that it was men who created the rule of "women and children first" when it came to rescuing people from life-threatening emergencies.

Thomas Sowell, Random Thoughts (www.jewishworldreview.com), 29 July 2008

Despite people who speak glibly of "earlier and simpler times," all that makes earlier times seem simpler is our ignorance of their complexities.

Thomas Sowell, Random Thoughts (www.jewishworldreview.com), 5 September 2007

I am so old that I can remember a Democrat, at his inauguration as President, say of our enemies: "We dare not tempt them with weakness."

Thomas Sowell, Random Thoughts (www.jewishworldreview.com), 1 May 2007

Some people seem to think that we live in more "liberated" times, when all that has happened is that one set of taboos has been replaced by another and more intolerantly enforced set of taboos.

Thomas Sowell, Random Thoughts (www.jewishworldreview.com), 9 January 2007

My brother recalled his younger days down South during the Jim Crow era, when he had a job working late. After work, he had a long walk back home in the middle of the night. But, he says, “When I got to the black neighborhood, I felt safe!” That speaks volumes about what has happened since then.

History

Thomas Sowell, Random Thoughts (www.jewishworldreview.com), 30 November 2005

People who think that they don’t owe anything to anybody should read David McCullough’s outstanding new book “1776,” to see what hell other people went through to create the freedom that we enjoy and abuse today.

Thomas Sowell, Random Thoughts (www.jewishworldreview.com), 30 November 2005

Not only does the passage of time produce knowledge, it also produces ignorance. You would have to be about 50 years old to remember what the situation was like before Roe v. Wade. As the passage of time removes people with first-hand knowledge of an earlier era, they are replaced by people ignorant of those times and therefore easy targets for demagogues.

Thomas Sowell, Random Thoughts (www.jewishworldreview.com), 21 September 2005

General Omar Bradley said this of Winston Churchill after the Allied victory in Europe, “His speeches were worth an army.”

James C. Humes, The Wit and Wisdom of Winston Churchill, p. xvii-xviii

[On the impact of the Wesleyan revival on 19th century England] Of the faith which enabled a man to abandon the cherished habits of a lifetime, and to go forth ready to spend and be spent in his Master’s service, ... which made the selfish man self-denying, the discontented happy, the worldlying spiritually minded, the drunkard sober, the sensual chaste, the liar truthful, the thief honest, the proud humble, the godless godly, the thriftless thrifty—we can only judge by the fruits which it bore. That such fruits were borne is surely undeniable.

J. H. Overton, cited in J. Wesley Bready, This Freedom—Whence? p. 96

Scotland has since the Reformation sent more saints to heaven than any country in Europe of the same population.

David Bogue, Discourses on the Millennium (1818), p. 362.

The Apostles’ Creed pits the world’s only history-grounded faith against all others.

Rousas J. Rushdoony (1916-2001), The Foundations of Social Order: Studies in the Creeds and Councils of the Early Church (1968)

It is impossible to write about the history of modern western culture without writing about Martin Luther. The idea that we should stand up for things that we believe in. The idea that every person is precious in the sight of God. These are things that we take for granted, but these are things that Luther had to fight for.

Alister E. McGrath

God writes the history of the world with the pen of His people.

James Nickel

A student asked me today why I include so much history in my math teaching. “Why don’t you just teach math?” This question was a timely teaching moment. It shows that compartmentalization is a common malady. I answered, “To include history is important because history, seen from Christian eyes, reflects God’s march of providence.” Hence, every subject must be understood historically to be understood truly.

James Nickel

According to Civil War historian Shelby Foote (1916-2005), no one really knows what the “Rebel yell”

History

sounded like (close to “fox hunt yip mixed with a banshee squall” screamed while running). According to one Yankee veteran, it created a “peculiar corkscrew sensation up your backbone” when you heard it and “if you claim you heard it and weren’t scared, you never heard it.”

We are all sufferers from history, but the paranoid is a double sufferer, since he is afflicted not only by the real world, with the rest of us, but by his fantasies as well.

Richard Hofstadter, “The Paranoid Style in American Politics” (Harper’s Magazine, November 1964, pp. 77-86)

In history, however, as in all scientific endeavors, the facts never just speak for themselves - they are interpreted through colored lenses.

Michael Shermer & Alex Grobman, Denying History, p. 40

... history is cluttered with the wreckage of nations that became indifferent to God, and died.

Whittaker Chambers, Witness, p. 17

The twentieth century gave rise to one of the greatest and most distressing paradoxes of human history: that the greatest intolerance and violence of that century were practiced by those [communists and Nazis] who believed that religion caused intolerance and violence.

Alister McGrath, The Twilight of Atheism, p. 230.